

Alternative Loan Programs

Students who desire additional funding may be able to borrow through a private/alternative (non-federal) educational loan. Alternative educational loans are sponsored by banks and lending institutions. In general, to be approved for an alternative loan, the student must be credit-worthy or have a credit-worthy co-signer. The co-signer can be someone other than a parent. The co-signer must sign the promissory note along with the borrower.

As a wise consumer, you should review and compare alternative loan programs to find the right fit for your needs. Once you have started an application, you must monitor its progress through the four steps that must be completed. Each lender's process may vary, but each step must be accomplished before a disbursement is made to Notre Dame College as payment on your student account.

Notre Dame College will work with any private/alternative lender and does not have a preferred lender list for alternative loans. Visit our website at <http://www.notredamecollege.edu/finaid> and click on "Alternative Loan Information" in the Quick Links box for more information and links to comparison tools that allow you to accurately compare rates and terms from multiple private loan lenders side-by-side.

You are free to choose any alternative lender.
